FROM THE OTHER SIDE.

Some Interesting Side Lights on the

Indiana State Fair. They are off! The red flag drops and up in the grand stand the chatter of talk diminishes in volume. The horses sweep along the broad track, the occupant of each sulky perched on the little frame that serves as a seat, ridiculously close to the tall of the trotter he is urging. It seems an hour to the expectant crowds before the quarter-mile post is reached. But now it is passed, and on the horses go, straining every nerve. And now they have left the half-mile post behind. The grand stand arises to its feet and stays there. The last three-quarter mile post is left in the distance, and the horses sweep down the home stretch, a mighty shout greeting them and piercing the very heaven. They pass, one beautiful slender creature well to the front. The red flag drops once more, and a tumuit of cheers and exclamations rings out, followed quickly by the chatter of talk again. Somebody's horse has won.

But it's over there, across the field from the grand stand, that the real heart interest in the race has been felt-over there in front of the long row of great red barns. The people of the grand stand and the rail birds along the track are enjoying the nerve-tingling sensations of the sport; they are admiring the patrician-like thoroughbreds, their speed, their endurance, their courage, but, after all, such emotions are only those of an idle whim gratified, of a recreation that has been satisfied and pleased, and they view the scene as they would a play. It's the rough fellows "over on the other side" that are experiencing the true sentiment of the occasion-the men that have had a hand in the breeding of the winning horse, the men that have known his "daddy" and his "mammy" as old

STABLES OF THOROUGHBREDS. The stables of the thoroughbreds at the State fair are among the most interesting of all the great features at the big Indiana show. The little colony of horsemen, trainers, and stable boys is busy from up each morning at the break of day preparing the horses for their morning exercise and getting everything in readiness for the drivers who put in an appearance themselves before the day's life of the exposition is fully under way. From the moment that work about the barns begins at cawn there is enough to do to keep everybody active until nightfall, for the horse are treated as princes of the blood and are watched over and cared for with the utmost diligence throughout their careers

After the horses have been groomed and put through their morning work by the trainers they have to be scraped, blanketed, "cooled out" and comfortably installed in their stables. And there is little time for killing on the part of the stable employes when the morning exercises are at an end, for there are always a hundred things to led to before the animals are considered in readiness for the streunous work of the afternoon beginning with the clang | had coverings were the most popular, and of the gong in the judge's stand. But life around the training camps seems to have its charms, nevertheless, and the older emloyes will tell you that when a lad starts life as a stable boy he seldom gives up his work for any other accupation, but continues to stick to his job until he either accomees a trainer himself eventually or falls into the rut of routine labor about the barns from which he finds it impossible to extricate himself. The stable boys, themselves, the majority of whom are colored lads, are quite as nteresting studies as the horses. They tow upon each other nicknames that are marvels of ingenuity, and the horses too, receive cognomens that are in amusing contrast to the high-sounding titles of the racing programme. champion is treated with the familiarity that becomes old friends, and it is "Bill," "Pete," "Old Top," or any other appellation that may seem to fit the equine star. Not only are the peculiarities of stable life history. Nobody knows their origin and about the barns cares anything about it, for that matter. And yet these traditions are followed as religiously as though success alone depended upon their observance. If you have ever stood near in scraping and sponging a racer prepara-"cooling him out" you may wondered somewhat at the whistling noise which they make while at work. Nobody on earth knows just why they do it, except that it is one of the inalienable rights of stable grooms and they would as soon think of sitting about the camp fire at night without indulging in a song as in 'dressing down" a horse without that whistling accompaniment. USE QUAINT TERMS. It is hard for the uninformed visitor at the racing stables to understand much of the talk of the employes, as they use many quaint terms and expressions that can be heard nowhere else in the world outside of the barn or paddock. And then, too, it is not easy for the uninitiated to become accustomed to some of the fossil ideas which cling to the turf. For instance, as one of the trainers explained yesterday to a party of men and women who were visiting the stables, so many people seem unable to get it through their heads that in racing law a thoroughbred yearling dates his period of usefulness from the first day in January. It matters not in the least when he was born, he is legally a year old on the first day of January succeeding his birth. If a youngster comes into the world in the latter part of December-which seldom happens on account of the regularity observed in the breeding season-he is duly registered as a yearling on the first of the following month. The usual foaling season, however, is from the middle of January to the first of April, and so most of colts or fillies are at least several months old when they are registered as

'The baby racers are left in the care of their dams, as a rule, until the beginning of autumn," said one of the trainers in discussing the customs of the stables. "Then they are weaned and turned out into paddocks, the colts and fillies having separate inclosures. This is the playing time of the race horses, rather brief, it is true, but filled with the fun and frolic of cheildhood In the following spring they are made 'bridlewise'-that is, accustomed to wearing the bridle or harness. They are then taken to market and sold at auction to owners of racing stables unless their ownand the serious business of life begins for them at once."

LITTLE WORLD OF THEIR OWN. The men and boys about the stables live in a little world of their own and their hearts seem centered entirely in the success of the horses whose care is in their keeping. Their "bosses" do everything to discourage betting among them, but it would be a herculean task indeed to put a stop altogether to their small speculations concerning the results of the races from morning until late at night. The boys are | day to day. They make wagers among themselves when it is hardly possible, as it is during the present state fair, to "get on with the bookmakers, but the gamblin feature does not dominate the sport with them. They love the "hosses" that they have known so intimately from the time the handsome animals were awkward little fellows with ungovernable legs, and it is because of the sentimental feelings that control them that they give vent to expressing almost barbaric joy when "Bill" or "Pete" or "Old Top," as they insist upon calling them, forge to the front with flashing eye and dilating nostril as the home stretch is reached and the end of the lightning journey-the judges' stands-looms into view.

Singers Attract the Crowds.

The exhibits at the fair yesterday had large number of visitors and the various displays were thronged all day, despite the disagreeable weather. Those which the persons in charge were kept busy showing strangers around. There are many novel and interesting booths on the grounds, all of which were crowded yes-

Both wills were hotly contested before Surrogate Fitzgerald, who admitted the will of 1896 to probate, holding that the later will, usually known as the Patrick will, was a forgery. The bulk of the estate is in Houston, Tex.

Y., Sept. 18 .- The twentieth day of the Hudson Valley Streetrailway strike saw a car start from here over the division in charge of deputy sheriffs and militia and manned by nonunion men. As the car proceeded north from the powerhouse jeers came from the by-standers. On its progress through the back square the conductor was struck by a bystander and the car stopped, the militia getting off and clearing a space around the car. After a short delay it proceeded. A car from the powerhouse to Fort Edwards was stopped several times by breaks in the trolley wire, and at Sandy Hill a crowd of several thousand assembled. A. Werden, 1 4 false alarm of fire was rung and the hose cart run to the track and left standing and an attempt made to place hose on the rails. The car was sent ahead and demolished the hose cart. Special to the Indianapolis Journal. MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 18.-The locals were given a vicious jar this afternoon by the Indianapolis team. Watkins's men got revenge on their opponents by registering two victories against them. It was Indianapolis day all through, the first game being won by a score of 10 to 3, and the final exhibition 6 to 2. The contests were too one-sided to be of interest. The brilliant work of the visitors in the first game, however, acted as a redeeming feature, and the crowd was made to feel that it had witnessed some real baseball. The final scene was not much from any point of view. It was devoid of features of any kind, and was far from enjoyable. The visitors played very much in champion form in the first game. They not only hit the ball and fielded perfectly, but used good judgment on the bases and scored repeatedly on the locals. Suthoff and Sporer were the opposing twirlers in this con- New York124 test, and both were hammered hard. Suthoff, however, kept the hits well scattered, and the dozen drives secured by the locals brought slim results. Suthoff's team-mates supported him in grand form. The entire bunch played the game. Woodruff in left made a brilliant catch at a critical moment, and Kihm, Kuhns, O'Brien and Fox could not have performed better in the inereign Grand Lodge, I. O. O. F., to-day, by field. The batting of Kihm and Hogriever

were the other big features. Both Minneapolis and Indianapolis had all kinds of trouble for six innings in the second game, and for a time it looked as and the amendment was supported in a if the locals would be able to win. Up to vigorous manner by the Indian Territory | the seventh the lead had been in the locals' possession, and the visitors' prospects for tion on the ground that many men of high | a double victory were far from bright, but the home team could not stand the prosperity, and with the score 2 to 1 in its favor in the seventh, let the visitors pile up four dictions, expressed the fear that if adopted | runs. Two singles, a pair of errors, a pass it would prove the opening wedge which and a few steals sandwiched in did the business. The visitors were now three runs to the good, and were never overtaken thereafter. Kellum and Mullin pitched good ball, but both were given poor support. NEW YORK, Sept. 18 .- Frank Ferrell's De Reszke, with only ninety-six pounds on his back, and ridden by J. Martin, won the Speculation stakes at Gravesend today. The ring was hit heavily on the victory of the Ferrell horse, 25 to 1 being laid against his chance at one time. Clonmel rushed to the front in a few strides and made the running to stretch, where De Reszke and Huntressa moved out, and in a furious drive, De Reszke won, ridden out, by one and a half lengths, from Huntressa, who beat Merito a length. Runnels, from the stable of John A. Drake, won the last race cleverly from Roxane. The Drake stable also scored another victory in the third race, Vincennes carrying his colors home first. The winner was bid up to $2,300, an advance of $1,200 over his entered price. The stable bid the customary $5 and retained its horse. The weather was rainy and the track slow. Winners and odds: G. Whittier, 40 to 1; Sombrero, 13 to 10; Vincennes, 6 to 5; De Reszke, 20 to 1; Gloriosa, 5 to 2; Runnels, 11 to 10.

Jockey Worthington, on the first named, remounted and secured third money. Jockey Wilson, on MacLaren, was knocked senseless for a time and his mount was out of the race, The value to the winner was $1,120. The third race was declared off on account of scratches and a seven-furlong affair was substituted. This was handily won by Ed Adack, with Ida V. second and Albert Enright third. Winners and odds mund, 9 to 2; Small Talk, 30 to 1; Ed Adack, 5 to 2; Crest, 11 to 10; Lucien Appleby, 9 to 10; Scotch Plaid, 3 to 1.

Friday my attorneys will apply to a judge of the Court of Appeals for a dissolution of the injunction. The defense claims Judge Field has no jurisdiction. dition for Their Bout.

Willie Fitzgerald and Eddie Cain, who will be the principals in the ten-round contest at the Empire Theater to-night will arrive from Cincinnati this morning with their seconds. They are both in the pink of condition, having been in training for several weeks with Young Corbett and Terry McGovern. They will be able to give a fast bout under straight rules and it is believed it will be the prettiest exhibition that has been seen at the Empire. Fitzgerald will be accompanied by Willie Mack, and Joe Humphreys will come with Eddie Cain. There is great rivalry be-tween Cain and Fitzgerald and the follow-. ers of the two camps will watch the outcome with interest. Both Cain and Fitzgerald are anxious for a victory, as they figure that to win will be laurels for the camp they represent. They are clever light-weights and are fast at infighting. The regular show will conclude at 10:1 and the preliminary between Powell and Young will be called about 10:40. The main bout will be called at 11 o'clock.

Thought His Father Was Joking.

New York Times. During a discussion of the manners of the sons of distinguished Americans, the other evening, an instructor in one of the private military academies along the Hudson river told this story: "The faculty of our school were delighted when Governor Crane, of Massachusetts, sent his son to us, and we all grew very fond of him, for he was a bright and extremely modest youth. In fact, his modesty was so marked that we often talked about it among ourselves. One day there came to the school a party of distinguished visitors, and the principal called up a number of the brightest boys in order to question them. Among these was young Crane.

"'Robert, who is the Governor of Massachusetts?' inquired he, turning to the boy "The youth thought for a time and then answered: 'I am sure I don't know.' "'You certainly don't mean to tell me you do not know who the Governor of your own State is?' replied the astonished man. 'Think a moment longer.' "I am sorry, sir, but I really don't know,' answered the boy. "'Why, Robert, your father is the Governor of Massachusetts,' exclaimed the bewildered principal. 'Yes he told me that himself once,' answered the boy in the same quiet manner, 'but I never believed it. I thought he was only stringing me.'
